

Storage Pods Make Moving Easy

Storage pods are a safe, secure, and convenient way to move your belongings without dealing with the pressure of a moving companys schedule. When the pods are dropped off at your home, you have full control over how long you take to pack them, when they are picked up, when the company brings them to your new home, and how long you take to unpack them. Pods are one of the least stressful ways to manage a move. Using storage pods is simple. When you call the company, you decide how many pods you will need and when you want them delivered. The company brings the empty pods to your home. You fill them at your own speed and secure them, then phone the company to come pick them up. They load them onto their truck and either take them directly to your new home, or hold them in their storage facility until you call for them. When you receive the pods at your new address, you unpack them as slowly or quickly as you like, then call the company to remove them. Thats all. Often you dont even need to be present when the pods arrive or are picked up.

Although pods are excellent any time you are moving house, they are exceptionally well suited to moves in which you will not be moving into your new home immediately. For instance, if you sell your previous house before you close on a new house, you may need to stay in a hotel or a temporary rental for a month or two while you wait to be able to move into your new house. If you go through a regular moving company, you will have to have your belongings delivered to storage (with all the wear and tear of moving them off the truck and into the storage unit), then you will have to have them loaded onto a new truck to be brought to your new house. Basically, you run all the risks of moving twice, and you pay for the privilege twice. With storage pods, your possessions stay secure in the pod throughout the process, so they run far less risk of damage, and the price for storing the pods and reloading them when you are ready for them is factored into the fee. You move only once, and you pay for the move only once. On top of that, storage pod companies are used to storing pods for a lengthy period, so you will not need to reassure a moving company that expected you to call for delivery within a week of your first move.

As you can see, pods are simple to use. The convenience of pods can ease the strain of even the most involved and overcomplicated move. Why not simplify your upcoming move and place an order for storage pods? Related information Storage . Portable storage . Portable moving container . Self-storage .

About the Author

More references on moving pods, visit 1800PackRat.com.

Source: <http://sportsmans-shop.com>