

Self storage as a moving solution

The facility of self storage is additional storage space available in the form of containers which people used while in the process of moving or otherwise. These spaces are convenient to serve residential as well as business purposes. The storage spaces are secured either through your own locks while the company provides locking systems as well.

Once a tenant has rented such a storage space the complete control of the space is with the tenant and the service provider does not have any right over the space. This right is only present till the tenant continues to pay the rent and if the rent is not paid the company gets a right of lien over the self storage as well as the belongings of the tenant. There are more than 50,000 facilities operating in the United States which goes to prove that these are accepted by the public as convenient method of storage. Such spaces are optimized for your needs and thus are available in a number of sizes. Many such facilities offer rental trucks for moving your belongings and a number of these provide them for free as well. The self storage company ensures that you do not need to run to the market to arrange for boxes and packing supplies. Also there is an on site manager present who lives at the facility to ensure security of your spaces. There other state of the art security systems present such as guards as well as individual door alarms to ensure maximum protection. The design of the facility will be an indicator of the security used. The onsite manager can be approached for push carts when required to move your valuables.

Most such securities do allow all individuals to enter and have an electronic gate access for which a pin is provided to each individual tenant. There are climate control self storage spaces present so that your belongings are protected from extreme temperatures. To allow maximum use of your storage space these spaces are secured with a roll up door which are similar to a garage door.

Though not a standard offering many spaces provide parking for motorcycles, boats etc which would be available at an additional cost and at specific locations. There are two basic types of units, indoor and outdoor. An indoor facility can only entered from inside the premises while to enter an outdoor one the companies facility does not need to entered. You can pay for the lease each month for the time period kept and credit cards for payment are accepted as well.

Self storage is similar to public storage which has been prevalent for a number of years. Public storage as is known to the public are lockers present on railways stations and in clubs as well. All items which are hazardous, combustible or toxic are not allowed in self storage spaces.

The self storage spaces cannot be used for sleeping as well and is only to store your belongings. Related sites Self-storage -- Portable moving container -- Pod storage -- Self storage --
