

Baby Pillows...Super Handy!

Nowadays, there are so many different types of baby pillows out there. All of them has a unique function, and there are some that you will be glad that you have! There are baby pillows that position the head and body of the baby while they are sleeping, there are baby pillows that are specifically designed for nursing, and there are even baby pillows designed to position a baby while they are riding in the car, just to name a few.

I think the bassinette pillows on the market today are great. They positioning the baby so that they are flat on their back, which is the recommended sleep position. These are great baby pillows, but there is a new version that I think is even better. The new version of this pillow has memory foam which will mold to the shape of babys head, making it mold to the pillow The memory foam will help to prevent a flat area from forming on babys head. This pillow will also help baby to have a peaceful night of sleep because they will not be able to roll around... they are positioned in one way all night.

Another type of pillow that is on the market today is called a nursing pillow. These baby pillows are shaped like a crescent and are great for all different types of things, not only nursing. I have found that they are great for supporting baby to view books, bottle feed, or be held, in addition to being great for nursing. These pillows are great for many things, and every mom should have one, whether they are nursing or not.

Care pillows prop babys head while going on a car trip. They are great to lean on when baby gets tuckered out. I really like them because they keep babys head away from the hard plastic on the car seat. Most car seats come with a pillow, but I prefer to purchase a separate one. The ones included with the seat just are not quite as cushy as one that you can pick out yourself.

Baby pillows have so many convenient uses. You can use them for anything from helping to support the baby while feeding, to keeping a baby still while sleeping, to riding in the car. Some are a little expensive, but if you can use them over and over, they will definitely be worth every dime you have spent.

About the Author

For more info on custom baby pillow, read valuebabygift.com.

Source: <http://sportsmans-shop.com>